Raphael Loewe Archives: Four Generations of Anglo-Jewish Scholarship

The Raphael Loewe Archives contain a selection of personal papers and academic productions of four generations of Anglo-Jewish scholars: Louis Loewe (1809-1888), who because of his competence both in European and Semitic languages, and also in Turkish, was chosen by Sir Moses Montefiore to act as his 'Oriental Secretary' and became his close confidant. His son James Loewe (1852-1944), Secretary of the Jewish Colonial Trust and educator. His grandson Herbert Loewe (1882-1940), Reader in Rabbinics at Cambridge. His great-grandson Raphael Loewe (1919-2011), Professor of Hebrew at University College London. They span almost two centuries and their work ranged from Biblical Hebrew through Hebrew poetry and translations, medieval Jewish thought and Anglo-Jewish history. They were in contact with some of the greatest scholars of their time and were involved in many of the momentous events in Jewish history through this period.

About

The Pamphlets Collection, comprising scholarly correspondence and offprints, as well as unpublished material was acquired by the former Fellow Librarian, Dr. Piet van Boxel, thanks to the generous support of Peter and Catherine Oppenheimer and Judith and Peter Wegner. The Personal Archive was generously donated to the Library by the family after Professor Raphael Loewe's passing in 2011, thanks to the good offices of Dr. Jeremy Schonfield.

The Loewe Archives Exhibition Team is grateful to all who contributed to our project in terms of adding archival material, offering advice, and to those who helped and supported us throughout the process.

We hope you enjoy the Exhibition and please write to us with your feedback!
