Jewish Music Class

The Sound of the kley zemer. Jewish instrumental music after 1800 – Part 2

Online course via Zoom on Mondays 18:15 to 19:15 (UK time)

The first day of this course will be Monday, 27 April 2026.

If you would like to register for this course, please contact Ms Priscilla Lange at academic.administrator@ochjs.ac.uk

Tutor: Dr Diana Matut

In Trinity Term 2026, Dr Diana Matut will teach the following Jewish music course entitled, 'The Sound of the kley zemer. Jewish instrumental music after 1800 – Part 2'.

Although vocal music is intimately linked to the Jewish experience, instruments and instrumental music have been part of Jewish culture since Biblical times. This term, we will explore the history of instruments in Jewish contexts, their usage, prohibitions and surrounding social and religious discussions as well as Jewish instrumental music written after 1800. This is the second of two parts exploring instrumental musics after 1800.

OXFORD BIBLICAL HEBREW SUMMER SCHOOL 2026

We are happy to announce that the Oxford Biblical Hebrew Summer School will take place online from August 24 – August 28 & September 1-4, 2026. The classes will be held online via Zoom.

The school offers nine days of intensive teaching in Biblical Hebrew. Each weekday there will be three hours of teaching, delivered in two separate 90-minute sessions, from 11.30-13.00 and 14.00-15.30 (UK time).

The course corresponds to two full terms of intensive teaching for a full-time university student. It is open to students with or without experience of the language. For the former, it offers a chance to review and consolidate what they have previously learnt. For the latter, it will provide a strong foundation from which to begin formalized study of Biblical Hebrew.

The cost of the school is £290 per student for 27 hours of language instruction, including all video recordings of the lectures. This does not include any textbooks/workbooks, which the student will be expected to acquire for him/herself.

Closing date for applications: Friday 10 July 2026 (places are limited).

Please see the leaflet with further information here. The application form and further information may be downloaded here.

Please complete and return the application form by email to Dr Stephen Herring: stephen.herring@ames.ox.ac.uk or mail to: OBHSS, Oxford Centre for Hebrew and Jewish Studies, Clarendon Institute, Walton Street, Oxford, OX1 2HG

Successful applicants will be notified as soon as possible upon submission of application.

MEDIEVAL HEBREW READING GROUP

Weeks 1-4, 6-8

Thursdays 10:00-11:00 am

In-person: Catherine Lewis Lecture Theatre, Clarendon Institute, Walton Street, Oxford OX1 2HG and online via Zoom: see link below.

Convenors: Judith Olszowy-Schlanger and Joseph O’Hara

This reading group is an opportunity to practise reading directly from images of medieval Hebrew manuscripts in an informal setting. No advance preparation is required and all skill levels are welcome!

This year we will look at documents and manuscript excerpts from a broad range of the many genres found in medieval Hebrew texts, including scientific, literary, and legal. We will consider their palaeography, language, and historical context, and learn practical skills for reading unfamiliar handwriting, dealing with damaged texts, and interpreting dates and unusual vocabulary.

There will be coffee, tea and cake from 11am in the Common Room of the Oxford Centre for Hebrew and Jewish Studies for those attending in person.

In Week 5, there will be no reading group but please join the Medieval Anglo-Jewish Texts and History group which will meet in person from 10am to 4pm on Thursday, 28 May in the Catherine Lewis Lecture Theatre Clarendon Institute, Walton Street, Oxford OX1 2HG.

In order to attend this reading group via Zoom, please register here:

Place: St. Anne's College, Seminar Room 5

Convenors: Yaacov Yadgar and David Borabeck

Lectures are open to all.

Week 1, Tuesday, 28 April

Raef Zreik, What's the problem with the Jewish State?

The paper will deal with a very old theme: The Jewish and Democratic State of Israel. Despite the fact that following the war of annihilation on the people of Gaza, and ethnic cleansing policies in the West Bank, only few still buy into the terminology Jewish and Democratic State, still this paper aims to unpack some misconceptions that are related to this debate. The paper will suggest replacing all three keywords in the title in order to reveal the real problems and the inherent violence underpinning the Israeli project. I suggest talking about Zionist (instead of Jewish), Liberal (instead of Democratic), Movement (instead of State). When things are presented in this alternative way, then we will find out that the problem is political, not logical, it is historical and not merely conceptual. As such, not logical-philosophical acrobatics can solve it.

Raef Zreik, is a Professor of moral and political philosophy at Tel Aviv College and Prof. of Jurisprudence at Ono Academic college and senior researcher at Jerusalem Van Leer Institute. Recent publications include: Kant's Struggle for Autonomy (2023), 'War and Self-Defense: Reflections on the War on Gaza' in Analysis and Kritik (2024); 'Zionism and Political Theology' in the journal Political Theology (2023); The Tyranny of Truth and the Tyranny of Opinion: Thinking with Hannah Arendt' in Theoretical Inquiries in Law (2025).

Week 2, Tuesday, 5 May

Elad Lapidot, Levinas and Decolonial Israel

My talk reflects on the relations between post-Holocaust Jewish thought and decolonial thought through the work of French-Jewish philosopher Emmanuel Levinas. Recently thinkers criticized Levinas for his Eurocentrism. In my recent book, State of Others. Levinas and Decolonial Israel (Indiana UP, 2025), I argue that Levinas anticipated this critique and from the 1960s on sought to develop the foundations for decolonial Jewish thought – and for decolonial Zionism. To demonstrate this claim, my talk will analyze Levinas's entire intellectual project as articulated around a fundamental turn between the period prior to 1968 and the post-68 period. The turn relates to Levinas's understanding of the relationship between Judaism and Western civilization – and to his position with respect to the State of Israel and to the Palestinian question.

Elad Lapidot is Professor for Jewish Thought at the University of Lille, France. His work is guided by questions concerning the relation between knowledge and politics. Among his publications: State of Others. Levinas and Decolonial Israel (Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 2025), Politics of Not Speaking (Albany: SUNY Press, 2025), Jews Out of the Question. A Critique of Anti-Anti-Semitism (Albany: SUNY Press, 2020), Hebrew translation with introduction and commentary (with R. Bar) of Hegel's Phänomenologie des Geistes, Vol. 1 (Tel Aviv: Resling Publishing, 2020).

Week 2, Wednesday, 6 May

Bashir Bashir, The Political Theory of Israel/Palestine: a Shift from Minoritarian to Majoritarian Politics?

This talk critically explores the value of alternatives to ethnonational partition by demonstrating the limits of the decades long and dominant frame of majority vs. minority. The majority vs. minority frame (e.g., Ethnic Democracy; Jewish and Democratic) was viewed for decades as an allegedly superior frame to alternatives to partition for, among other things, favoring the two-states solution and reconciling Israeli Jewish majoritarianism with the rights of the Palestinian Arab minority(ies). Israeli Jewish majoritarianism has by now received much critical attention, especially following the rise of discourses like multiculturalism and indigeneity. Critics often object to the inherent contradiction in the alleged compatibility of the Jewish and democratic character of the State of Israel. My critique in this talk partly sympathizes with these liberal and multicultural critics but seeks to offer a new and unique objection, namely that the majority vs. minority frame itself is in fact inadequate for conceptualizing Israel/Palestine. More specifically, I show, the majority vs. minority frame presupposes two groundless assumptions, namely the moral desirability and practical feasibility of territorial and demographic partition and segregation.

Bashir Bashir is associate professor in the department of sociology, political science and communication at the Open University of Israel and a senior research fellow at the Van Leer Jerusalem Institute. During the academic year (2024-2025), he was a fellow at the Wissenschaftskolleg zu Berlin. His primary research interests are nationalism and citizenship studies, liberalism, democratic theory, decolonization, the politics of reconciliation, and alternatives to partition in Palestine/Israel. Among other numerous publications, he is the co-editor of The Holocaust and Nakba: A New Grammar of Trauma and History (Columbia University Press, 2018); and The Arab and Jewish Questions: Geographies of Engagement in Palestine and Beyond (Columbia University Press, 2020). His writings have appeared in English, Hebrew, Arabic, Italian, German, Portuguese, and Japanese.

Week 4, 19 May

Stav Shufan-Biton, "Just Follow the Magic": Ritual Holy Time among Jews as a Minority Community in Comparison to Their Position as a Cultural Majority in Israel

In this lecture, I examine how Israeli Jews living outside Israel experience holy time, focusing on Shabbat, Jewish holidays, and local religious and civil holidays such as Halloween and Christmas. Drawing on ongoing ethnographic research based on interviews and observations conducted within Israeli Jewish communities in Cambridge and London, the findings show that cultural distance and a sense of temporariness enable the selective adoption of Jewish mitzvot alongside openness to local ritual practices. Interviewees with flexible religious identities, particularly those identifying as secular or traditional, actively choose rituals they perceive as enjoyable and meaningful. These include Jewish practices such as Hanukkah, Purim, or partial Sukkot decorations, as well as local practices such as trick-or-treating on Halloween, Christmas decorations, singing carols learned at school or kindergarten, and exchanging gifts. At the same time, some halakhic practices that were part of everyday life in Israel, including the weekly Friday night Kiddush, fasting or reduced activity on Yom Kippur, and partial observance of Passover, tend to be less consistently maintained in the new context.

Building on Ammerman's framework of lived religion, the analysis highlights how enjoyment, curiosity, and a sense of magic, alongside child centered and family-oriented logics, shape ritual participation and contribute to a reconfiguration of ethnic and religious boundaries in everyday life.

Stav Shufan-Biton is a sociologist and currently a Postdoctoral Fellow and Visiting Research Fellow in the Department of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Cambridge. Her research interests focus on the sociology of religion, the sociology of time, and Israeli society. Her doctoral dissertation examined understandings of the weekend among Jews in Israel and resulted in several peer reviewed publications, which are available online. She currently studies experiences of sacred time among religious minorities, including Jews and other groups, across the UK, with support from the Argov Centre for the Study of Israel and the Jewish People.

Week 5, Tuesday, 26 May

Itzhak Benyamini, The Citizen Crushed by the Political - An Israeli perspective

In this lecture, I intend to present the main arguments of my latest book, "A Psycho-Political Analysis of Netanyahu's Israel - The Israeli Anxiety" which has been recently published by Routledge. I will therefore seek to describe the contemporary collapse of the boundary between private and public in the liberal-democratic politics in the West, focusing on my personal experience as an Israeli citizen.

I argue that in Western politics, following the ancient Greek tradition, the relationship between the citizen and the political realm is dual; the political cannot claim the citizen solely to itself. The citizen, on its part, belongs to the political, but not entirely. At the same time, the pre-political, individual existence is already contained within the liberal political order. This is an aporia that should not be resolved as it stands at the root of liberal democracy.

I argue that because of the prolonged political crises in Israel, the citizens, especially the ones who object to the current right wing-religious regime, find themselves trapped within the political grip that does not leave them private space, not even a phantasmatic one. The elimination of the very possibility of existing as a citizen, consumed and at the same time sheltered within the political, is one of the indicators of the deterioration of Israeli politics into dictatorship.

Dr. Itzhak Benyamini teaches at the Bezalel Academy of Art and Design in Jerusalem and in the Psychotherapy Program at Tel Aviv University. His last books in English are Lacan and the Biblical Ethics of Psychoanalysis (Palgrave, 2024), and A Psycho-Political Analysis of Netanyahu's Israel - The Israeli Anxiety (Routledge, 2026).
